Ann Mond Johnson

Chief Executive Officer
American Telemedicine Association

Ann Mond Johnson is CEO of the American Telemedicine Association (the ATA), overseeing the only association focused completely on advancing the adoption of telehealth, with a diverse membership including leading healthcare delivery systems, academic institutions, technology solution providers and payers, as well as partner organizations and alliances. Ann is an industry thought leader representing a growing telehealth sector that includes leading healthcare delivery systems, academic institutions, technology solution providers and payers, working to integrate virtual care into a modernized, two-channel or hybrid care delivery system. Under Ann's direction, the ATA is focused on federal and state policy initiatives needed to ensure permanent access to telehealth services, as well as advancing a framework to address disparities using telehealth that will be broadly applicable across healthcare so that everyone has access to safe, effective, and appropriate care when and where they need it. As part of her vision to create a broad and inclusive community of telehealth stakeholders, the ATA launched the first-ever Telehealth Awareness Week in 2021, bringing together telehealth champions and supporters from every sector of healthcare to underscore the growing value of telehealth and its critical role in care delivery. Ann has been a pioneer in healthcare for more than two decades, as both an entrepreneur and executive leader, and has launched and built innovative companies that leverage data, decision support tools, and digital apps to make the healthcare experience better for consumers. In 2020, Ann was recognized by Modern Healthcare magazine on their 100 Most Influential list. She was inducted in the Chicago Entrepreneurship Hall of Fame in 2016.
